

LOVE IN MOTHERHOOD

It is common sense that a mother's love is important for a child to grow, maintain good health, and prosper. What we often fail to acknowledge is how stress, tension, anxiety, and depression deprive mothers the ability to nurture their children. A stressed mother is unable to love her child in a fully nurturing way that promotes the physical and mental health, life, and overall wellbeing of the child.

The main underlying cause of stress in women is unhealthy, strained relationships with the crucial men in their lives. The two most important men in a woman's life are her father and her husband. We strongly recommend resolving any problems, or deep-seated resentment in these key relationships. We can assist in this process by guiding you on a path to gently dissolve the negativity.

This journey is effectively pursued with the yearning to forgive, let go, and devotion to the Heavenly Father. We are here to assist you in resolving any hurdles that you encounter along the way. Whether you are married, divorced or single—our timeless wisdom will assist you in overcoming the challenges of motherhood. As you overcome the negativity, fear, hopelessness, trauma, tension—you will find the patient, enduring, nurturing love for yourself and in extension, for your child. On this foundation you will find meaningful love for your child, that will support the growth of their true identity and talents.

Love in motherhood is enabled by the love of a man for his wife. A healthy, loving, man-woman relationship is crucial for fruitful motherhood. A mother's love in full collaboration with a father's love is an essential aspect for the development of a well-balanced human being. Unfortunately, modern day life tends to overlook this reality, resulting in a compromised generation. A steady man-woman collaboration is ideal for raising healthy, stable children.